Preface

The federal government is the largest publisher, provider, and disseminator of information in the world. It provides information that is of value to everyone, from the person needing guidance on gardening to the researcher tracing a bill from its inception in Congress to its passage as Public Law. As depository librarians in the State of Kansas, we adhere to the principles set forth by the Government Printing Office (GPO) and the Federal Depository Library Program (FDLP) which support unrestricted access to government information in any format and the "public's right to know". Government publications are a valuable and necessary part of our libraries' collections. They provide current and historical records of the political workings of the federal government. They are the primary source of national statute, code, regulation, and current statistical data. Government publications address many topics of public interest, both in and out of the political sphere.

Information dissemination policies characterize the nature of our society. They indicate our nation's political process and our government's attitude towards the free or restricted flow of information. "Today, under provision of Title 44, United States Code, Chapter 19, the government provides information free of charge to designated federal depository libraries in private or public institutions, which in turn must make them available to any member of the public who wishes to use them".1

1 Joe Morehead, Introduction to United States government information sources (Englewood, Co.: Libraries Unlimited, 1999), 46.
I. Introduction

The Kansas Depository Libraries are part of the national Federal Depository Library Program (FDLP) and are thus designated to receive federal government information. It is the Kansas Depository Libraries' responsibility to provide access to this information for the residents of Kansas. In 1981, the Depository Library Council, an advisory group to the Public Printer, recommended that each state prepare a plan that would coordinate the federal documents depository program within that state. The Council maintained that implementing a state plan would help identify and resolve problems as well as improve service and access. The Public Printer went on record as encouraging such plans "as a modern and potentially cost-saving means of improving public access to government documents in accordance with the intent of Title 44 of the U.S. Code." Depository libraries were advised in 2001 to revise and update their State Plan to address the issues arising from the transition to a more electronic environment.

II. Purpose Statement

The purpose of this plan is to assure that a complete body of federal information is available and freely accessible to all residents of Kansas. This is to be accomplished through the acquisition, development, and management of current and retrospective collections, regardless of format.

The Kansas State Plan is designed to assist the Federal Depository Libraries in the state in meeting the obligations, goals and objectives of the FDLP. It is a supplement to, not a replacement for, the Instructions to Depository Libraries, and the Federal Depository Library Manual.

III. Authority & Responsibility

A subcommittee of the Kansas Library Association (KLA) Government Documents Roundtable (GODORT) has developed this plan. In order to be effective, the plan requires the support of depository libraries in the state. The subcommittee of KLA-GODORT recommends establishing a Kansas State Plan Advisory Committee consisting of the following:

- The Regional Depository Librarian shall appoint three members besides him/herself to a rotating two-year term. Each member will have one vote on any changes or recommendations to the State Plan.

- The goal will be to have broad membership representation by geographic region, library type and selection profile.

- The Kansas State Plan Advisory Committee will monitor the implementation of the State Plan.

- However, the Regional Depository Librarian will be the final authority on questions of policy and procedure regarding implementation of the State Plan.
The director of the library, along with the depository librarian of each institution in the FDLP will sign a document of agreement indicating their commitment to the goals set forth in the State Plan.

IV. Organization

A. Selective Depository Libraries
There are seventeen selective depository libraries in the state of Kansas (see Appendix). Selective depositories provide free and equitable access to government publications (including those published in electronic format) made available through the FDLP, and provide for the proper maintenance of depository materials entrusted to their care, in accordance with Title 44, Chapter 19 of the U.S. Code. Some selectives retain all or most of their documents received, while others maintain a strict 5-year weeding and disposal schedule.

B. Regional Depository Library
The University of Kansas Government Documents Library is the Regional Depository Library for Kansas. The Regional Library receives and retains at least one copy of all new and revised FDLP tangible publications and also provides free and equitable access to government information resources regardless of format. The Regional grants permission to selectives for the disposal of materials and coordinates with selectives to promote quality depository library service in Kansas. The Regional Library provides certain services to the selective libraries including, but not limited to, interlibrary loan, reference and technical processing advice, and the approval for disposal of depository materials. Selective depositories may contact the regional library with other requests as well.

C. State Library
The State Library shall be advised of any recommendations or changes made to the State Plan. The Regional Depository Librarian shall provide a copy of the plan to the Kansas State Librarian and the Kansas State Library Commission.

V. Communication

D. Email/listservs
GODORT-L, hosted by the University of Kansas is the official communications vehicle for federal depository libraries in Kansas. This closed listserv is used for official messages from the Regional Library, for notices of meetings, and also for general information and questions for and from documents librarians. This list is also used to share information about Kansas state documents and the Kansas State Library. Each federal depository library in Kansas is advised to have at least one staff member subscribed to GODORT-L. Any number of other staff members may also subscribe. The Regional Depository Librarian, who may be contacted for any updates or deletions, manages the list.
